- Hammurabi code: It was one of the earliest law code. It was based on the law of “an eye for and eye”.

"Si un hombre golpea a otro libre en una disputa y le causa una herida, aquel hombre jurará "Aseguro que no lo golpeé adrede" y pagará el médico".

"Si un hombre ha ejercido el bandidaje y se le encuentra, será condenado a muerte."

"Si un hombre ha acusado a otro hombre y le ha atribuido un asesinato y éste no ha sido probado en su contra, su acusador será condenado a muerte."

"Si un hombre ha reventado el ojo de un hombre libre, se le reventará un ojo."

a. The Nile

Ancient Egypt is one of the most important civilizations in History. The origins date back to about 3100 b. C. until the conquer of the Romans in the first century.

Why was the River Nile so important?

- The land was fertile there. It flooded the area each year and it left mud which made the fields fertile
- The Egyptians built dams and canals to hold and to carry water inland.
- The River Nile was also the main “motorway”. Sailing ships transported people and goods.
- Egyptians Civilization would have not existed without the Nile.
The pharaohs

- The origins: King Menna united all the territories along the River Nile. Their king was called Pharaoh.

- The power of the pharaoh: Egyptians believed that the pharaohs were gods. He passed laws, ruled the country, owned the land, controlled trade and led the army. Nobody could look at the pharaoh in the eye or touch his body.
